Brief History of Cameroon

The earliest inhabitants of Cameroon were probably the Bakas (Pygmies)

The early European presence in Cameroon was primarily devoted to coastal trade and the acquisition of slaves

Beginning in 1884, all of present-day Cameroon and parts of several of its neighbors became the German colony of Kamerun, with a capital first at Duala (Douala) and later Buea and then Jaunde (present-day Yaounde).

After World War I, this colony was partitioned between Britain and France under a June 28, 1919 League of Nations mandate

In 1955, the outlawed Union of the Peoples of Cameroon (UPC), based largely among the Bamileke and Bassa ethnic groups, began an armed struggle for independence in French Cameroon

Brief History of Cameroon

French Cameroons achieved independence in 1960 as the Republic of Cameroon

The modern state of Cameroon was created in 1961 by the unification of two former colonies, one British and one French

The formerly French and British regions each maintained substantial autonomy

Ahmadou Ahidjo, a French-educated Fulani, became President of the federation in 1961. Ahidjo, relying on a pervasive internal security apparatus, outlawed all political parties but his own (the Cameroon National Union, CNU) in 1966

Ahidjo resigned as President in 1982 and was constitutionally succeeded by his Prime Minister, Paul Biya

Paul Biya

His Cameroon People's Democratic Movement (CPDM) party, formerly the CNU, holds a sizeable majority in the legislature

Cameroonian Flag

Three equal vertical bands of green (hoist side), red, and yellow, with a yellow five-pointed star centered in the red band

The vertical tricolor recalls the flag of France

RED symbolizes unity

YELLOW the sun, happiness, and the savannahs in the north

GREEN hope and the forests in the south

The STAR is referred to as the "star of unity"

Kumba town

Kumba is the largest town in south-west Cameroon.

It is an important regional transportation centre, connected by railway to Douala and by road to many other important towns in the country.

Several major roads to the provincial interior radiate from Kumba, making it one of the main commercial towns in anglophone Cameroon.

Kumba is a trade centre for locally grown oil palms, rubber, tea, bananas, plantains, and cocoa (the major export crop).

It also has a timber industry.

Cameroon: Family Structure

Both monogamous and polygamous marriage are practiced

Average Cameroonian family is large and extended

In the north, women tend to the home, and men herd cattle or work as farmers

In the south, women grow the family's food, and men provide meat and grow cash crops

Cameroonian society is male-dominated, and violence and discrimination against women is common

Cameroon: Clothing

Cameroon clothing is influenced by western clothing

The area of Cameroon which was under the influence of the west and was colonized, one finds a great impact of the western world, its culture and religion

The traditional clothing of Cameroon includes the Kabba which is mostly worn by women in the confines of their homes

These are free flowing garments and movement is pretty easy

Cotton is used to make most of the clothing

Embroidery and basain are frequently used in Cameroon clothing
